

Version 06.05.2022

The five members, all from Graz, united in 2014 and after only a short creative period they released their first, self-titled EP in 2015. In the following year, the band collaborated with the Austrian bands Witchrider (Reciprocity-Split, released under Fuzzorama) and Colours of Monochrome (Mapale-Split) and also contributed a song to the soundtrack of the play "Das Lächeln des Gottes", directed by Zdravko Haderlap, all while working on their first album.

In September 2017 Ultima Radio released their debut-album "A Thousand Shapes", which received highly positive feedback from the Austrian media as well as from foreign media for its adventurous interplay between numerous genres and experimental influences.

The album also features several guest musicians on the upright bass, keys and vocalists.

In October 2019 their second album "Dusk City" was released, which presented a more grown-up musical approach compared to its predecessor and delivered an impressive demonstration of more confidence and consistency. Its underlying concept of the collapsing metropolis and its critical display attracted considerable attention and received much praise by many critics. The band also released a Session Video for their new song "Hunt" in cooperation with the Austrian Band "Cadû".

In May 2022, Ultima Radio released their third studio album 'Sleep Panic Repeat'. The album is defined by a time that has been difficult for all of us, a time where personal circumstances collided with the ongoing pandemic caused by COVID-19. It is the band's most profound projection of emotions on a new musical endeavor that explores and challenges the conflict between individuals and society, the fear of failure and meaninglessness, but also the opportunity to be left to one's own resources. In contrast to the previous albums, 'Sleep Panic Repeat' follows an approach that is powerful and heavier, making it their most forceful and personal piece of music so far.

With their variety of powerful and experimental sounds, ranging from Alternative, Crossover to Stoner Rock, Ultima Radio are trying to overcome the limits of typical genres, intending to find their very own style: eccentrically and deliberately, they do not hesitate to break open conventional boundaries between genres and to connect and create whatever sounds intriguing. Combined with socio-critical messages presented by a colorful singing voice, they ensure their music also carries powerful statements that accompany their musical expression. From mighty and impulsive drum beats to heavy, thrilling guitar riffs, the instruments accompany the singer through brute and massive, but also calm and gentle compositions. Ultima Radio: powerful Rock and stirring soundscapes, merged into a well-working symbiosis. A thrilling and intense live-performance paired with custom-made stage lights that has so far been demonstrated and praised in more than 120 shows throughout Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Slovenia, Slovakia, Romania and the Czech Republic. Two of its members, Julian and Zdravko, have also started their own individual projects within the band. Julian is now leading the recording studio "Grelle Musik" and also produced their latest LP, which has a great impact on the band to be able to hone their very own sound. Zdravko has recently started his own booking agency "Luckhole Booking."
